

LEFT: "Angkor Wat in Cambodia is filled with twists and turns and little areas to explore. It was an extremely hot day and there were lots of international tourists visiting, as well as lots of local couples having their wedding photos taken. I suspect these gentlemen were part of one of the wedding groups by the way they were dressed, and when they went inside to escape the heat, I followed them and managed to get this image."

ABOVE: "The enormous natural spaces of the Okavango Delta in Botswana are truly awe-inspiring. The area where the water is lying is normally a road, but it had flooded and the water added great reflections to the already beautiful landscape. I was exceptionally lucky to be able to get so close to the lions."

The photographer

Dutchman Jan Zwart worked as a fisherman, banana farmer, service station attendant and foie gras producer before becoming a professional photographer in 1986. He has worked as a photographer in places as diverse as Antigua, Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Botswana, Canada, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dubai, Egypt, Fiji, Hong Kong, Haiti, Hawaii, Ireland, Kazakhstan, Libya, Madagascar, Mali, Niger, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Sri Lanka, Syria, Suriname, Turkmenistan, Venezuela and Zanzibar. www.janzwart.nl

See page 54 for top tips on how to create your own travel photos.